I've looked for the flash drive here at home in every pair of pants and jacket I wore last week, repeatedly. I've looked through the car repeatedly as well. No luck. I remember having it in my pocket last week, and I believe late last week. But, I can't remember the last time I had it. Now, I can't find it anywhere. Damn.

Thanks for sending the Excel file. I'll work on that this afternoon, since it doesn't look like I am coming in to work.

I'm really angry at myself about that flash drive. Thanks for looking, though.

I took care of Freddie.

Your black flash drive doesn't appear to be in your office anywhere. I looked around in the desk, credenza and everything, but I don't see it. Could it be in the pocket of one of your jackets or in the Pilot?

Many thanks for putting out all those e-mails to the cadets. I'll get you back - I promise.

I'm hoping to get calls from cadets, in response to the e-mails I just sent out. I'll probably send out more later. I'm including my mobile phone, though, so perhaps they will try to reach me through that.

I cannot find the small black flash drive that I was using last week. Can you look around the office for it? I know I had it last week; I remember fiddling with it periodically last week. However, it is not in the pocket of any pair of pants I wore last week. Can you look around the office for it? It MAY be in a drawer of my desk, but I do not remember putting it there.

Also, can you get in touch with Freddie Brown, in HR, and tell him I will have to miss the FERPA briefing today? Hopefully, there are not too many new employees, and I can brief them some other time.

Thanks

Subject: RE: Summer Camp

I received your voice mails yesterday, and I am sorry I was not able to take either of your calls. Thank you very much for taking the time to call me. I understand you are extremely busy, and have great responsibilities.

I had difficulty hearing your message, and thus, am not clear on all of the questions you asked. Nevertheless, I will try to respond to the questions I could hear.

First, I am conducting an investigation of a complaint that was made to the school by a private individual. No "formal" civil or criminal investigation has been initiated. Although the complainant could certainly file a report with the police, which would start a criminal investigation, or file a lawsuit in civil court, which would start a civil investigation, the complainant has done neither. Moreover, I am hopeful that, by conducting an investigation on behalf of the school, no "formal" investigation - criminal or civil - will occur. Of course, I cannot guarantee that, as I have no control over what the complainant does.

Second, I do not believe the identification of whether you are a "subject" of an investigation is applicable here. My experience with that term is limited to the brief contact I had with the U.S. Attorney's office and/or the Department of Justice. That is, in my experience, a U.S. Attorney (or an FBI agent, or other investigator for the U.S. Attorney) would categorize interviewees as "witnesses," "subjects," or "defendants." The designation as a "subject" indicated that the U.S. Attorney, or the FBI, believed the person to be more than merely a witness, but not necessarily (or perhaps not yet) sufficiently involved to be charged with a crime. Here, however, I am conducting a private investigation on behalf of the school. I cannot charge anyone with a crime. Thus, I do not see any application of the term.

To put your mind at ease, however, I can tell you that the complainant did not name you, during my interview with that individual. The complainant did provide me with one name, and a general time period. I would like to speak with you because you were working at the Summer Camp during the time that the individual identified. I have no information that you did anything wrong. Instead, I merely believe you may have information about the particular summer at issue. More directly, you may have information about the person who made the complaint. (To put yours and your officer's minds at ease, if I were to analogize to the DOJ / U.S. Attorney stratification, I would consider you a "witness" at this point.)

If you can give me an idea of when you will call, and/or the phone number that will appear on the caller ID, I will be happy to move my schedule to accommodate yours. I understand you will be unavailable for approximately ten days, beginning yesterday. Based on that assumption, it appears you will be available again May 18, at the earliest. That is a Friday. I expect to be in the office that day. The following week, I will have meetings on Monday and Tuesday mornings, May 21 and 22, beginning at approximately 8:00 Eastern, each day and continuing until approximately noon. I will be out of the office most of Wednesday, May 23.

Again, thank you very much for taking the time to call me. I look forward to hearing from you soon. In the meantime, good luck, and Godspeed.

We CERTAINLY won't get anything more done at 5:00 on Friday afternoon! HA!

I'll be happy to talk with both of you next week. My week is already busy – I have meetings most of Monday, and also Tuesday morning. And, I am scheduled to be out on Thursday afternoon, at a minimum. I ALWAYS have my cell phone with me, though, so you can reach me at 843- [REDACTED]

Dawes Cooke, Judge Howard, and Phillip Ferderigos and the late and long lamented Ed Turbeville and I looked very closely at the "sexual abuse" statute, including Doe v. Crooks, during the Arpaio cases, and it is one of the reasons we settled for such large amounts in those cases. In other words, I am NOT optimistic that we can escape this case, or others, based purely on the statute. I have much more to say on the matter, but would prefer to do so on the phone, rather than in e-mail. Thus, I look forward to talking with you next week.

In the meantime, have a great weekend.

Mark: Dave passed this on to me since I specialize in aberrant behavior. I can't imagine how I got the reputation. At any rate, I am gathering some opinions as to the statute of limitations. As it currently stands, the greatest weight is on the TCA statute of limitations. That is, [REDACTED] had a year after gaining his majority to make a claim. However, it has just been pointed out that there is the case of Doe v. Crooks, 613 SE 2d, 536 that gums up the works. I am going to further assign this matter to David Stuckey here at the Fund to manage, but let's do some real research on this before any interviews take place. Can we talk next week about how we shall proceed?

Gentlemen

I have held this file on my desk since August, thinking there would be additional developments. There were a scant few, in the days immediately before freshmen matriculated, but since then, I have had no more communication with the [REDACTED]. As a result, I submit this e-mail as an interim report - and request for reimbursement. I plan to put this file back in my file cabinet, but do not plan to take any action on it further.

As you may recall, during the week before freshman reported, [REDACTED] called, asking if The Citadel would accept [REDACTED] in this year's freshman class. I negotiated intensely with [REDACTED], explaining that [REDACTED] lacked at least [REDACTED] required for admission. Thus, we discussed a scenario in which [REDACTED] would take those classes at a community or technical college, and then matriculate with next year's freshman class. Under that scenario, The Citadel would also reach a financial settlement with [REDACTED]. I spoke with Dan during those negotiations, and he gave me authority of twenty-thousand ($20,000) dollars at that time. He asked for some documentation of expenses, and I relayed that request to [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] tentatively agreed to the proposal, and promised to provide me with documentation with which we could reach a financial settlement. However, I have not heard from him since.

As I indicated in my e-mail earlier (copied below), [REDACTED] now live in [REDACTED] whereas [REDACTED]. At last contact, [REDACTED] was working for a grocery store, and living with friends. During our negotiations, [REDACTED] indicated that he planned to bring [REDACTED] from [REDACTED] to [REDACTED] to attend a community college. Thus, I suspect that when [REDACTED] made that suggestion, [REDACTED] balked, and decided against attending The Citadel whatsoever. Of course, I have not called the [REDACTED] to confirm that suspicion.

We COULD receive a call sometime next summer from the [REDACTED] if [REDACTED] manages to take the required classes next spring or summer. I do not anticipate that will happen, however. The cadets now at The Citadel who attended camp with [REDACTED] several years ago are currently [REDACTED] and will be [REDACTED] if [REDACTED] enters The Citadel next fall. I doubt he will want to face them in that situation. Nonetheless, I will put [REDACTED] in the cabinet, and diary it for next spring.

Fortunately, since we now have a transcript of my interview with [REDACTED] we have an unequivocal trigger of the statute of limitations. As you know, under S.C. Code Ann. § 15-3-555, "An action to recover damages for injury to a person arising out of an act of sexual abuse or incest must be commenced within six years after the person becomes twenty-one years of age or within three years from the time of discovery by the person of the injury and the causal relationship between the injury and the sexual abuse or incest, whichever occurs later." At this point, we know that [REDACTED] has "discover(ed)... the causal relationship" between the injuries he described in the interview and the alleged abuse. Thus, at the very latest, the statute began to run on the date of the interview in June. Unfortunately, though, since the statute provides that the limitations period does not expire until three years after that discovery or six years after the person becomes twenty-one years of age, the period arguably does not expire until [REDACTED] birthday. That date is [REDACTED].

As I indicated earlier, I will be happy to send you a transcript of the interview, if you wish. In the meantime, though, I am attaching a pdf version of the receipts which I collected during my trip to [REDACTED]. (I will be happy to send hard copies of these documents, or the originals, to you via regular mail, if you wish.) These only consist of the flights from [REDACTED] and from [REDACTED] and the hotel room and conference room I used in [REDACTED]. This amount totals $1090.55. I put all of those amounts on my personal credit card, so if you could have a check issued to me, I would appreciate it. I am also attaching a copy of the bill from the court reporter, in the amount of $770. That bill is still outstanding, so I would appreciate you issuing a check directly to that company.

Thank you again for all of your cooperation in this incident. I am sorry we were not able to close it with a release, but I feel confident that we are well armed if [REDACTED] should ever decide to pursue a case against The Citadel.

I hope you have a wonderful Thanksgiving!

Mark

David and Dan

I stopped in [REDACTED], after my convention trip to [REDACTED] at the end of June. I met with [REDACTED] (the former camper / complainant) and his parents, [REDACTED]. We talked for a couple of hours, and I recently received the rough draft of the interview. I know that [REDACTED] received a copy as well, and has forwarded it on to his son. I have not received an errata sheet, however.

I will be happy to provide a more complete report later, and indeed, I will be happy to send an electronic copy of the transcript, if you wish. In short, though, I found [REDACTED] to be believable. His story remained the same as the one he related to me over the phone some time ago. He described one incident, in which [REDACTED], a fellow camper, convinced him to visit the room of a counselor at the summer camp. Once there, the counselor showed them pornographic pictures on his computer, and convinced the two campers to masturbate with him. [REDACTED] again specifically and emphatically denied that he was touched during the incident. Nonetheless, he says he felt "dirty" and ashamed as a result, and that his grades and general standard of life suffered tremendously afterward. He ultimately [REDACTED] though he eventually [REDACTED]. He is currently working at a grocery store in [REDACTED] (a store I perceive to be similar to an [REDACTED]); though his parents are moving to [REDACTED]. He seems happy with his life, and professes to be much more at peace with himself now that he has revealed this incident to his parents. He and his parents described series of visits with doctors, psychologists, psychiatrists, etc, which have finally subsided with the revelation.

Importantly, [REDACTED] identified the counselor without hesitation when I showed him pictures from the relevant time period. He had previously identified him only as "Skip." When I showed him pictures of the staff, though, he immediately identified Skip Reville, who was serving as the "senior counselor" during the year in question. Moreover, his identification of the barracks the camp was in that year, and indeed, the room in which Reville was living, was accurate. Skip, as I have reported before, denies all of this. However, Arpaio's initial denials were equally forceful, and unfortunately, ultimately proved totally false.

[REDACTED] was by far the most emotional of the three. She feels significant animosity toward the school. [REDACTED], repeatedly said that he feels the school can be part of the solution, even as it was part of the problem. He is a Citadel graduate, however, and I suspect feeling much of the typical desire that graduates have to see their sons attend The Citadel. [REDACTED] seems interested in attending, though not as interested as his father is in seeing him attend.

Mark,

This email will confirm our telephone conversation on June 14, 2007 in which we discussed the above incident. During the conversation, we agreed that it would be in our best interest for you to meet with [REDACTED]. During this conversation with the [REDACTED] family, we agreed that a court reporter should be present in order to record the conversation for any possible litigation in the future. Even though a claim has not been filed with either The Citadel or the Insurance Reserve Fund, we would ask that the [REDACTED] family convey in writing their intentions and expectations regarding the investigation of this incident.

Once you have returned from that meeting, please give us a call.

Very respectfully,
