Soviet congress ends with stormy session

Also on the congress' final day, Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov disclosed for the first time that the Soviet Union has a foreign debt of nearly $52 billion.

Because of this, Ryzhkov said, it was not possible for Moscow to borrow more money from foreign countries or to import more goods — a policy some economists have said must be followed immediately in order to put consumer necessities on long-empty store shelves.

The prime minister said he was disclosing the country's foreign debt because he believed that "the people see Soviets/6A"

Jury declares 1978 death a murder, but absolves defendant

By Dorothy Lewis
Staff Writer

A jury found Friday that the mysterious death of Jerrilyn Mullins nearly 11 years ago was murder, but was not committed by the man accused by Mullins' husband.

The finding by the Dakota County jury in a wrongful death civil trial brought by Ronald Mullins marked the first time the Oakdale woman's death has been declared murder.

In the lawsuit, Mullins' husband accused Patrick Melbourne, 43, of Hastings of murdering his wife, who disappeared the night of Nov. 15, 1978, after a dinner party and an evening of drinking with some of Mullins' business associates at Chi Chi's Restaurant in Hitchfield.

The trial was heard by Judge Leslie Metzgen, who imposed a gag rule on all attorneys and the plaintiff throughout the four-day trial in Dakota County District Court.

Metzgen also declined to talk to reporters or to let them view papers dealing with the case. Please see Trial/6A

Lin Shaoyin, a 39-year-old graduate student of philosophy, has spoken out against his government for the past two years while in the United States. He even signed his name to an open letter condemning the government. The recent call to arrest the pro-democracy supporters has caused him to cancel a planned summer visit to Canton, his home.

"Before, I thought the reforms had gone far enough that I would not have to expect real bad trouble. But now, look at Beijing," Lin said. "Somebody may report me to the consulate — or not even that. The newspapers have my name."

Trial

Melbourne, a member of the dinner party, said he drove Jerrilyn Mullins to the Howard Johnson motel in Woodbury where her car was parked after her husband drove away from Chi Chi's without her. He said he had found the woman, who had left a table in the restaurant some time earlier, in the parking lot and that he offered to let her into his car to keep warm.

Mullins testified Thursday he was angered when he saw his wife in Melbourne's arms in a car in Chi Chi's parking lot. He said he drove off after he saw Melbourne charging across the parking lot.

"I didn't want a confrontation there," he said. Mullins and the 28-year-old woman had been married only 2½ months.

Her decomposed body was found June 30, 1979, in a Lake Elm swamp, near 10th Street and east of Interstate 694. Despite two autopsies, no cause of death could be determined and no criminal charges have ever been filed.

Before instructing the jury about 11:30 a.m. Friday, Metzen ordered a second defendant, TRW Vidar Corp. of Hastings, who had been Melbourne's employer, dropped from the case.

According to testimony, it was a TRW attorney who advised Melbourne not to let authorities search his car without a warrant and not to talk to police without an attorney present.

Melbourne's car was searched nearly a month after the woman's death, and it was clean. Melbourne testified that employees with company cars had to clean them once a month.

...expects that to be renewed in September as he continues his studies. But with his parents and a 6-year-old daughter, Lin Yao, back in Canton, the reports of turmoil make him increasingly anxious. Canton is about 1,000 miles south of Beijing.

"The television shows people arrested in my home city," Lin said. "My wife worries about the possibility of the Chinese government closing the door or the U.S. government breaking off relations."

Needle said the China Center is unable to help students like Lin bring family members to the United States.

"We can do nothing to bring loved ones from China because the U.S. is not issuing visas right now.

For the moment, the China Center is focusing nearly all of its attention on clarifying the visa extension issue and identifying all Chinese students whose visas will expire soon.

"They're immediately in a panic," Needle said. "We keep telling them, 'You're going to get a statement in the mail, just hang on.' But it's all complicated by the fact that they're constantly in here."

Needle stressed that the presidential promise to extend the visas of Chinese visitors was not immediate and absolute. But specifics will not be available until next week, she said.

Decision marks first time death has been labeled a homicide.

In her closing arguments, Deborah Ellis, Melbourne's attorney, called Mullins' charges "false accusations" prompted by Mullins' guilt and embarrassment for stranding his wife at Chi Chi's.

Ellis also suggested that the woman may have returned home in her car and that Mullins, who was angry, may have killed her, dumped her body and returned the car to the Howard Johnson lot.

However, police said the car had not been moved from the lot, and a search found no signs of foul play.

Ellis also suggested that Jerrilyn Mullins may have wandered into the swamp after she broke away from someone else who picked her up and drove her to an area known as a lover's lane.

Raising Melbourne's criminal record, Ellis asked if his conviction in 1970 in Ohio (for breaking into a young woman's home and beating her) meant that "Melbourne is not likely to tell the truth."

Since Jerrilyn Mullins' death, Melbourne has been convicted twice in Dakota County. In 1980, he was convicted of child abuse and sentenced to 90 days in jail, with 60 days suspended. He was convicted in 1983 to a year in Dakota County Jail and 10 years' probation for second-degree criminal sexual assault involving a 10-year-old neighbor girl.

In her closing remarks, Ellis asked the jury if Melbourne's lying about his educational background on a job application "makes him a murderer."

Charles Faulkner, Mullins' attorney, told the jury "the evidence shows that Patrick Melbourne killed Jerrilyn Mullins."

He noted that Dr. John Plunkett, Dakota County coroner, testified that undigested food in the victim's stomach indicated she died within two hours after she ate. Plunkett said toxicology tests showed a 0.10 percent alcohol count in the body, and 0.15 percent in the brain tissue.

Plunkett also testified that the woman had a broken bone in her left hand, which Faulkner said was consistent with her trying to fight off an assailant.

Faulkner also said that yellow fibers on the soles of the victim's shoes found during the autopsy showed "she never got out of (Melbourne's) car. She was killed and her body dumped," he insisted.

Faulkner contended that Melbourne took a shower in his basement, rather than upstairs, when he got home "to clean off the mud, dirt and debris."

"He took advantage of Jerrilyn Mullins after she had been drinking," and he killed her, the attorney said.

Washington County sheriff's officers who worked on the case could not be reached Friday for comment. Faulkner and Mullins were also unavailable.

The jury also determined that if compensatory damages were allowed, the amount would be $255,667.

Melbourne, a member of the dinner party, said he drove Jerrilyn Mullins to the Howard Johnson motel in Woodbury where her car was parked after her husband drove away from Chi Chi's without her. He said he had found the woman, who had left a table in the restaurant some time earlier, in the parking lot and that he offered to let her into his car to keep warm.

Mullins testified Thursday she was angered when he saw his wife in Melbourne's arms in a car in Chi Chi's parking lot. He said he drove off after he saw Melbourne charging across the parking lot.

"I didn't want a confrontation there," he said. Mullins and the 28-year-old woman had been married only 2½ months.

Her decomposed body was found June 30, 1979, in a Lake Elm swamp, near 10th Street and east of Interstate 694. Despite two autopsies, no cause of death could be determined and no criminal charges have ever been filed.

Before instructing the jury about 11:30 a.m. Friday, Metzner ordered a second defendant, TRW Vidar Corp. of Hastings, who had been Melbourne's employer, dropped from the case.

According to testimony, it was a TRW attorney who advised Melbourne not to let authorities search his car without a warrant and not to talk to police without an attorney present.

Melbourne's car was searched nearly a month after the woman's death, and it was clean. Melbourne testified that employees with company cars had to clean them once a month.

member as he continues his studies.
But with his parents and a 6-year-old daughter, Lin Yao, back in Canton, the reports of turmoil make him increasingly anxious. Canton is about 1,000 miles south of Beijing.

"The television shows people arrested in my home city," Lin said.
"My wife worries about the possibility of the Chinese government closing the door or the U.S. government breaking off relations."

Needle said the China Center is unable to help students like Lin bring family members to the United States.

"We can do nothing to bring loved ones from China because the U.S. is not issuing visas right now.

For the moment, the China Center is focusing nearly all of its attention on clarifying the visa extension issue and identifying all Chinese students whose visas will expire soon.

"They're immediately in a panic," Needle said. "We keep telling them, 'You're going to get a statement in the mail, just hang on.' But it's all complicated by the fact that they're constantly in here."

Needle stressed that the presidential promise to extend the visas of Chinese visitors was not immediate and absolute. But specifics will not be available until next week, she said.

Decision marks first time death has been labeled a homicide.

In her closing arguments, Deborah Ellis, Melbourne's attorney, called Mullins' charges "false accusations" prompted by Mullins' guilt and embarrassment for stranding his wife at Chi Chi's.

Ellis also suggested that the woman may have returned home in her car and that Mullins, who was angry, may have killed her, dumped her body and returned the car to the Howard Johnson lot.

However, police said the car had not been moved from the lot, and a search found no signs of foul play.

Ellis also suggested that Jerrilyn Mullins may have wandered into the swamp after she broke away from someone else who picked her up and drove her to an area known as a lover's lane.

Raising Melbourne's criminal record, Ellis asked if his conviction in 1970 in Ohio (for breaking into a young woman's home and beating her) meant that "Melbourne is not likely to tell the truth."

Since Jerrilyn Mullins' death, Melbourne has been convicted twice in Dakota County. In 1980, he was convicted of child abuse and sentenced to 90 days in jail, with 60 days suspended. He was convicted in 1983 to a year in Dakota County Jail and 10 years' probation for second-degree criminal sexual assault involving a 10-year-old neighbor girl.

In her closing remarks, Ellis asked the jury if Melbourne's lying about his educational background on a job application "makes him a murderer."

Charles Faulkner, Mullins' attorney, told the jury "the evidence shows that Patrick Melbourne killed Jerrilyn Mullins."

He noted that Dr. John Plunkett, Dakota County coroner, testified that undigested food in the victim's stomach indicated she died within two hours after she ate. Plunkett said toxicology tests showed a 0.10 percent alcohol count in the body, and 0.15 percent in the brain tissue.

Plunkett also testified that the woman had a broken bone in her left hand, which Faulkner said was consistent with her trying to fight off an assailant.

Faulkner also said that yellow fibers on the soles of the victim's shoes found during the autopsy showed "she never got out of (Melbourne's) car. She was killed and her body dumped," he insisted.

Faulkner contended that Melbourne took a shower in his basement, rather than upstairs, when he got home "to clean off the mud, dirt and debris."

"He took advantage of Jerrilyn Mullins after she had been drinking," and he killed her, the attorney said.

Washington County sheriff's officers who worked on the case could not be reached Friday for comment. Faulkner and Mullins were also unavailable.

The jury also determined that if compensatory damages were allowed, the amount would be $253,867.
